The One Question Most Families Avoid

If your income disappeared tomorrow, how long could the people you love keep their life exactly as it is — the home, the school, the groceries, the stability?

For most families, the honest answer is "not very long." Not because they don't care, but because no one ever sat down and did the math. It feels too heavy, so we push it off to "someday."

This guide exists to make that "someday" simple. In the next few pages you won't get a sales pitch — you'll get an actual number (your family's protection gap), the truth about what coverage really costs, and a short checklist to close the gap. No pressure. Just clarity.

The peace you're looking for isn't in avoiding the question. It's in finally answering it — and knowing your family is covered no matter what.

The four questions worth answering today

- ? Would your family have immediate cash for final expenses (often $8,000–$15,000+)?
- ? Could your household replace your income for at least 12–24 months?
- ? Would the mortgage still get paid — or would they have to sell the home?
- ? Is there a plan for the future — kids' education, everyday bills, retirement?

"My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge."

Know Your Number: Your Protection Gap

Fear shrinks when a vague worry becomes a clear number. Fill this in with rough figures — you don't need to be exact. This is the single most valuable thing you can do in the next five minutes.

Your annual income × 10 (income replacement)
+ Remaining mortgage balance	+
+ Final expenses (~$12,000)	+
+ Children's education fund	+
+ Other debts (cars, loans, cards)	+
– Current savings & existing coverage	–
= YOUR PROTECTION GAP

Example: $60,000 income × 10 = $600,000 + $200,000 mortgage + $12,000 final expenses + $50,000 education – $30,000 savings = a $832,000 gap.

Surprised by the number? Almost everyone is. That gap is exactly what the right policy is designed to fill — and it usually costs far less than people expect to cover it. (Proof on the next page.)

A quick rule of thumb

If you want a shortcut instead of the worksheet: aim for coverage worth 7–10× your annual income, plus your mortgage, plus final expenses. Most families land somewhere between $250,000 and $1,000,000.

"But Isn't It Expensive?"

This is the fear that stops most people — and it's usually based on a guess, not a quote. The truth: when you're reasonably healthy, term life coverage often costs less than the subscriptions already on your card.

The real question was never "Can I afford insurance?" It's "Can my family afford me not having it?"

Actual pricing depends on your age, health, and coverage amount — which is why I never quote a number until I've learned about you. But the point stands: it's almost always more affordable than people fear.

The four fears that hold people back — and the truth

-  "I'm too young / I don't need it yet."
Young and healthy is exactly when coverage is cheapest and easiest to lock in — you're insuring the low rate, not just the risk.
-  "I already have coverage through work."
Group coverage is usually just 1 × salary and disappears the day you leave the job. It's a nice start, not a real plan.
-  "I'm not healthy enough to qualify."
There are no-exam and simplified-issue options built for real people with real health histories. Don't disqualify yourself — let's find out.
-  "It's morbid / I don't want to think about it."
This isn't about death — it's about love and stewardship. You're making sure the people you love are held, even in the hardest moment.

Which Coverage Actually Fits You?

You don't need to understand every product — you just need to know which conversation is yours. Find the row that sounds like your life:

IF THIS IS YOU...	THE SOLUTION PEOPLE IN YOUR SHOES USUALLY WANT
Young family, tight budget, kids at home	Term Life — the most coverage for the lowest cost while the kids are growing up
Homeowner worried about the mortgage	Mortgage Protection — pays off the home so your family never has to leave it
You want protection and savings	Whole Life / Cash Value — lifelong coverage that builds money you can access while living
Main earner, can't afford lost income	Disability Income — replaces your paycheck if illness or injury stops you working
Near or in retirement	Annuities — turn savings into income you can't outlive
Some health concerns / older	Simplified & Final Expense — no-exam options so loved ones aren't left with the bill
Honestly not sure	That's the most common answer. One short call and we'll map it together — no pressure

You don't have to figure this out alone. The whole point of an independent agent is that I shop strong carriers for you and match the fit — you're not signing up for anything by asking.

"My God will meet all your needs according to the riches of His glory in Christ Jesus."
